

EMBROIDERY

Modern commercial embroidery uses a machine to stitch thread into fabric using digitized patterns to mimic hand-stitched embroidery of the past. Embroidery is durable, and adds a professional touch to logos, emblems and initials on jackets, polos, hats, gifts and more.

Artwork must be prepared for the commercial embroidery machine. Digitizing is the art of programing the stitch pattern to best represent the artwork. There is a one-time digitization fee of $40.00 for new orders.

Embroidery machines are pre-programmed with a diverse, but limited set of fonts. Other fonts can be digitized as artwork.

Embroidery is most often used by businesses for a professional look on office and workwear. Embroidered logos can make a good impression on work shirts, outerwear and hats. We offer a large variety of products for you to order.

One square inch of embroidery contains about 2,000 stitches. Stitch count is used estimate cost of material and production time. Both are factors in your price quote.

There are no minimums required with embroidery.

Foam can be incorporated to add more depth to your embroidery. Also known as 3D Puff Embroidery, this style can help to make your artwork stand out further.
